IPSA: Securing Your Workforce for Government Contracts

Industry Personnel Security Assurance (IPSA) is a critical framework designed to ensure the security of personnel working on government contracts that handle sensitive information.

To gain access to classified material, individuals must undergo National Security Vetting (NSV). Traditionally, this vetting was sponsored by the government department or prime contractor. However, with the introduction of IPSA, eligible organisations can now sponsor their own employees for NSV.

This shift towards industry-led vetting is a significant development for companies operating in the defence supply chain. To be able to sponsor employees for NSV, organisations must achieve IPSA certification. This demonstrates a robust commitment to personnel security and provides greater control over the vetting process.
